

ALEX ADDAMS

THE DOMINOS FALL

They silence jesters, truth denied,
the curtain falls where voices cried.
Colbert is hushed, his chair is bare,
the laughter dies, replaced with fear.

Kimmel erased, the stage unlit,
a warning clear, though few admit.
The state intrudes, the screen grows dim,
the chorus breaks, yet none may hymn.

The dominos fall, one by one they descend,
the pattern is written, we know how it ends!
The dominos fall, and the silence will reign,
if no one resists, then the darkness remains.

They twist the laws, they crown the lie,
they call it peace while freedoms die.
The ink runs red, the pages burn,
from history's script, we never learn.

The dominos fall, one by one they descend,
the pattern is written, we know how it ends!
The dominos fall, and the silence will reign,
if no one resists, then the darkness remains.

They shutter the screens, proclaim it is law,
but silence imposed is the crack in the core.
They promise protection, yet tighten the chain,
their order is built on the people's pain.

Colbert was first, and Kimmel was next,
the jesters are gone, and the people perplexed.
They brand it disorder, they call it untrue,
but truth is the one thing they cannot subdue.

They bend every rule, they fracture the stage,
they fear every voice that will not obey.
We've walked this road, we've seen it before!
When freedom is hushed, it returns nevermore.

The dominos fall, one by one they descend,
the pattern is written, we know how it ends!
The dominos fall, and the silence will reign,
if no one resists, then the darkness remains.

The dominos fall, yet the voices still call,
stand now together, or we'll lose it all.

The dominos fall...
The dominos fall...
The dominos fall...
The warning to all.

ALEX-ADDAMS.COM

Maybe there's a little Addams in you too.